New Findings:

- People are starting to say that the organizers of the convoy were underestimated, and they seem to be always one step ahead.
- Some are saying that the officers are still showing too much sympathy towards the protesters.
- There are mixed emotions regarding the arrest of an older gentleman who failed to identify himself which was caught on video. The supporter of the protests viewed this as a violent arrest and a desperate act.
- There have been questions about the officers' willingness to follow orders as protesters are seen carrying fuel cans past the police. There has been questions posed about a possible police mutiny.

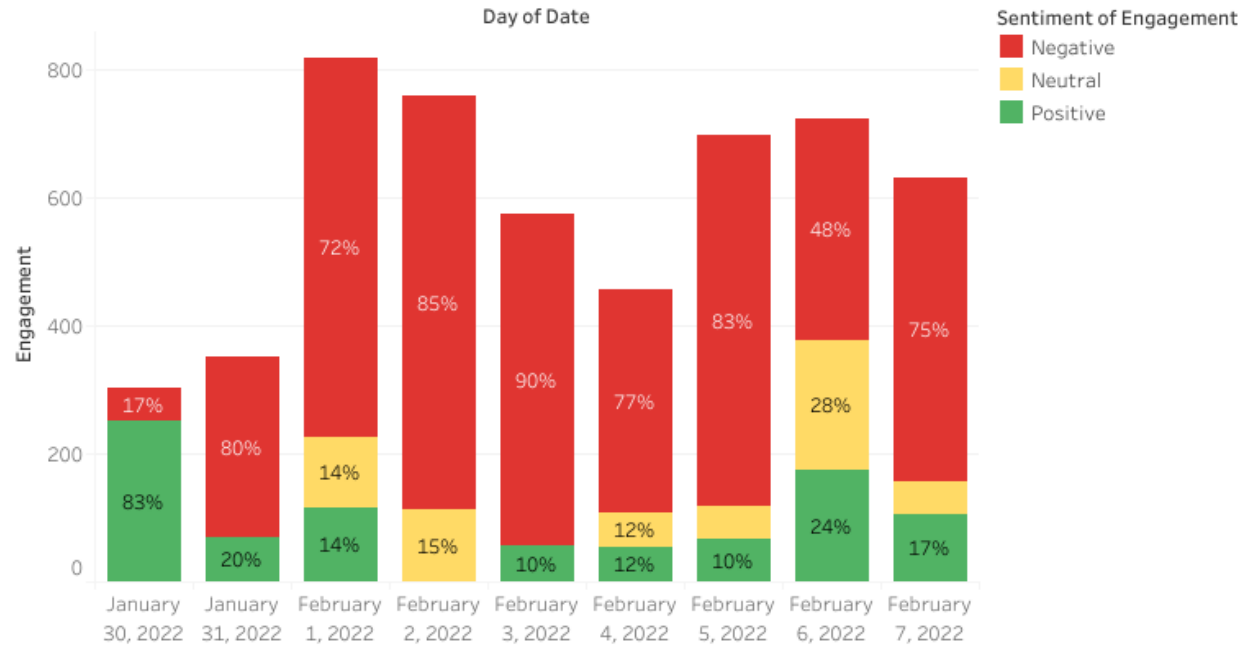

Resignation:

In the past two weeks, there have requests for the resignation of Chief Sloly, Mayor Watson, and Councillor Deans. The requests began on Monday, January 31st. The peaks occurred last week but the conversation has remained steady. The residents of Ottawa mention Chief Sloly the most, followed by Mayor Watson and then Councillor Deans. We will continue to monitor this conversation as we progress.
